

Happy Fridays for everyone.

Teacher Ronnie is with us again today. You might have noticed that English likes to steal words from other languages. Latin, German, Greek, and even French are victims of English theft! In this vocabulary lesson, she will teach you some of the many French words that exist in the English language. She will show you the meaning of words like “foie gras”, “hors d’oeuvre”, “du jour”, “faux pas”, “crème brûlée”, “café au lait”, “eau de toilette”, and more. These are commonly used by native English speakers even though they are taken from French. She will also demonstrate the correct pronunciation, which may be different than you think.
